

Exercise Update

Module 1

Spent a few hours navigating github. I actually found dillinger and markup more straight forward than github. Got frustrated a number of times, and had to go on several walks but hey! I made it to the end of the exercise and I'm really glad I kept going.

Writing in dillinger; adding links and photos were pretty straight forward once I watched a the videos Prof. Graham had uploaded for us, and I realised using Creative Commons to search for photos that exists on the web already in order to upload them on to markdown.

With github, I got quite a few errors with the codes especially when it got to the pulling requests from a classmate.